Manual Tester required and should possess strong analytical and problem-solving skills and have an eye for detail. We require a highly motivated individual with well-developed interpersonal skills. You will be part of a small team of testers, primarily focused on retail eCommerce sites. You will be involved in the preparation of test cases, test plans and will be required to execute tests both manually and where necessary using automated testing tools.

The applicant will be system testing and integration testing on new projects and regression testing as part of on-going site support for a number of clients. Experience of testing RESTful services, querying databases and reviewing log file output is expected.

You...

Talented, enthusiastic, focused, eye for detail, professional. Keen to learn and find new ways of doing things. A team player who is proud of your work and wants to share with everyone! You like working in a fast paced environment and are driven by the desire to improve the online purchasing experience for everyone, no matter what they are buying and from where!

You will be client focused and be willing to be flexible when required to make them happy, including working at client locations.

The techy bit....we need you to be really great at:

System Testing experience. Experience of testing transactional eCommerce websites, ideally retail based. Be able to analyse requirements, identify testable conditions and write concise test scripts. High level of communication and interpersonal skills including experience of writing accurate and concise reports. Experience of liaising with customer and

Experience of testing RESTful services either manually or using tools such as Postman or ReadyAPI (SoapUI). Be able to review server log files and identify errors.

If you know some of this even better!

Retail sector, warehouse or fulfilment experience. Hands on usage of Selenium or other automation tools. Knowledge of the following technologies; Java, J2EE, DB2, DB Visualizer, SQL, XML, UNIX and MQ Series (IBM WebSphere Commerce would be good). Some exposure to pre-sales engagements and proposal writing. Hands on experience of JIRA, Confluence or other Atlassian tools. Experience of HTML, Flash and JavaScript.

Wunderman Thompson Commerce is a new global eCommerce consultancy that applies strategy, technical know-how and outstanding design to make a big impact through eCommerce.

How? By creating outstanding websites and inspired shopper journeys. It's why we work with some of the most exciting brands around such as GAME, Halfords, Sainsbury's, Selfridges, Specialized and Ted Baker.

Tell me more! We're an inclusive group of more than 1350 thinkers and doers from WPP's leading commerce agencies: Salmon, POSSIBLE Commerce and Gorilla Group alongside two Amazon specialists - all under the world-renowned Wunderman brand. Our reputation is based on having the best the business - people who are inspired yet straight-talking, and who really want to understand not just our clients but their customers. We are passionate about innovation in everything we do, and proud of what our people achieve, empowering and respecting every one of them.

Together, we keep our clients and their customers inspired and ahead through digital, future-ready sites, solutions and services. When our clients win - we win.

With new, state-of-the-art offices in Watford, and two other cool agency offices in Central London, we've got 20 locations mapped across Europe, North America and Asia.

As our business grows internationally, we're seeking new people who share our values and work ethic. We especially want to encourage more women to join, and take a key role in shaping some of the best eCommerce sites and experiences in the world.
